

Objective-Setting Copilot Agent

Demo Scenarios & Presenter Guide

Real inputs · Expected outputs · Workday-ready text · Presenter tips

How This Demo Works

The agent automatically detects your role from your Microsoft 365 profile — so Scenario 1 starts exactly as any real user would: you open the agent and it already knows you're a People Manager. No setup, no configuration.

For Scenarios 2–4 you briefly tell the agent to adopt a different persona for the demo. A purple ROLE SWITCH INSTRUCTION box in each scenario shows you exactly what to type. This mimics how any employee at that level would experience the agent.

STEP	WHAT TO DO
1 — Open the agent	Launch the Copilot Agent. It silently reads your M365 profile and detects you as a People Manager. Scenario 1 starts here.
2 — Type the suggested prompt	Each scenario has a prompt chip showing the exact text to type. Use the suggested prompts from the agent to get started.
3 — Paste inputs in order	As the agent asks questions, paste each input from the INPUT block in sequence. They are calibrated to produce the best results.
4 — Role switch (Scenarios 2–4)	Before starting a new scenario, paste the Role Switch Instruction shown in the purple box. The agent will adopt the new persona.
5 — Point out the Workday-Ready Text	Each scenario ends with a green Workday-Ready Text box. This is the money moment — read it aloud. It shows how the agent's output can be used in a real workday.
6 — Use presenter tips	Orange tip boxes give you the talking point to land the business value after each output. Use them to bridge to the next scenario.

Scenarios at a Glance

#	SCENARIO	LEVEL SHOWN	KEY DEMO MOMENT
01	You set your own team objectives (natural start — no role switch needed)	People Manager (your real role)	Agent detects your level automatically and goes straight into the demo.
02	Improving a weak draft — task list to business outcome	Individual Contributor	Guardrail fires: agent explains the problem, pushes back, rewrites the draft.
03	Cascading team objectives to two direct reports	People Manager (stay in role)	Same team objective, two completely different individual outputs.
04	Executive sets business priorities and cascades to individual objective	Executive	Full top-down cascade: business priority to Workday-ready objective.

01

Setting Your Team Objectives — Natural Start

Your profile · Level auto-detected: PEOPLE MANAGER · No role switch needed

What This Shows

This is the most authentic scenario in the demo — it's you using the agent exactly as any real manager would. The agent reads your M365 profile, silently confirms you're a People Manager, and immediately takes you into the manager journey: team objectives first, then individual objectives for your direct reports. No setup. No configuration. No asking you to identify yourself.

AGENT SAYS

"Hi — I can see from your profile that you manage a team in Personal Banking. Before we write any individual objectives, let's make sure your team objectives are solid. Do you have those confirmed, or are we starting from scratch today?"

Suggested Prompt to Start

Set my objectives

Inputs to Provide as the Agent Asks

Enter these in order as the agent questions you. One response per turn.

Your team objective	Increase multi-product household penetration across our branch portfolio from 38% to 45%, and improve branch NPS from 62 to 72, by end of Q4
Business priority this connects to	Enterprise priority: deepen client relationships and grow personal banking revenue sustainably
Direct report to write objectives for	James Okafor — Senior Financial Advisor. Manages a book of 150 personal banking clients. Responsible for relationship-led sales and financial planning conversations. Currently completing his CFP designation in Q2.
James's key metric	His current product penetration within his book is 34% — I want him at 46% by Q4
Culture principles	Act with client empathy, lead with accountability, champion inclusion, bring your whole self
Development focus for James	He wants to move into a team lead role — stretch his leadership presence this year

Expected Output — James Okafor

STRATEGIC ALIGNMENT	Supports the branch team's commitment to growing multi-product penetration from 38% to 45% by Q4, directly advancing the enterprise priority of deepening client relationships and sustainable revenue growth.
WHAT	Grow product penetration within my 150-client book from 34% to 46% by end of Q4 by leading proactive, needs-based financial planning conversations — and complete CFP designation by end of Q2 to deepen the quality of those conversations.
HOW	By acting with client empathy — using CFP-informed insights to make every planning conversation genuinely useful rather than transactional; leading with accountability by tracking my book's penetration at each quarterly checkpoint and adjusting my outreach plan accordingly; and bringing my whole self by applying the leadership presence I'm building to mentor one junior advisor by Q3.
SUCCESS MEASURES	(1) Product penetration in my book reaches 46% by Q4. (2) CFP designation completed by end of Q2. (3) Proactive outreach completed for 100% of single-product clients by end of Q2.
QUALITY SCORE	4.7 / 5.0 — Strong cascade from team objective, specific to James's book and CFP context. Calibration-ready.

◆ WORKDAY-READY TEXT — copy this directly into Workday	By end of Q4, I will grow product penetration in my 150-client book from 34% to 46% by completing my CFP designation by Q2 and using those deeper insights to lead proactive, needs-based financial planning conversations across my entire book. I'll track my progress at each quarterly checkpoint, adjust my outreach plan where needed, and start building my leadership presence by mentoring one junior advisor by Q3.
---	---

■ PRESENTER TIP	Say: 'I didn't type my name or my level — it already knew. And it didn't ask me to fill out a form. It asked me one question at a time, exactly like a good manager would in a one-on-one. That's the experience every employee gets, not just the ones with great managers.'
------------------------	--

02

Improving a Weak Draft — From Task List to Business Outcome

Persona: Marcus Williams — Senior Financial Advisor · Level: INDIVIDUAL CONTRIBUTOR

ROLE SWITCH INSTRUCTION

For this scenario, please treat me as an Individual Contributor — a Senior Financial Advisor named Marcus Williams at a TD Personal Banking branch in Mississauga. Ignore my manager profile for this demo.

What This Shows

Marcus already has a draft objective — but it's a task list. This scenario fires one of the agent's most powerful guardrails: it identifies the problem, explains it in plain English, and rewrites the objective into something Marcus would actually be proud to submit. This is the clearest demonstration of quality control at scale.

Suggested Prompt to Start

Improve a draft objective

Weak Draft to Paste In

Paste this when the agent asks for your draft:

Complete all required training modules by Q2. Attend weekly team meetings and contribute to team discussions. Support manager with client calls and help with onboarding of new clients when needed. Work on improving my client satisfaction scores.

AGENT SAYS

"I can see what you're going for, but this reads more like a task list than a business outcome. The difference matters: tasks describe what you'll do, but objectives need to describe what will be different in the business because you did them. Attending meetings won't help a calibration panel understand your contribution. Let me ask you a few questions so I can rewrite this into something you'd be proud to submit."

Follow-Up Inputs After the Guardrail

The agent will ask questions — respond with these in order.

Your team objective

Increase multi-product household penetration from 38% to 45% across the personal banking portfolio by Q4

Your book size and accountability

I manage 180 personal banking clients — I own the relationship and am responsible for identifying financial planning opportunities across my entire book

Your current satisfaction score

My client satisfaction score is 7.4 out of 10 — I want to get it to 8.5 by Q4

Culture principles	Act with client empathy, lead with accountability, champion inclusion
Career aspiration	I want to move into a team lead role — development matters to me this year

Expected Output After Rewrite

STRATEGIC ALIGNMENT	Supports the team's commitment to growing multi-product penetration from 38% to 45% by Q4, advancing the Personal Banking enterprise priority of deepening client relationships.
WHAT	Grow my client satisfaction score from 7.4 to 8.5 out of 10, and convert at least 22 single-product clients within my 180-client book to multi-product households — both by end of Q4.
HOW	By acting with client empathy — leading proactive, needs-based financial planning conversations instead of waiting for clients to ask; holding myself accountable to a personal quarterly tracking discipline; and championing inclusive outreach so every client in my book, regardless of demographics, receives the same quality of relationship engagement.
SUCCESS MEASURES	(1) Client satisfaction score reaches 8.5/10 by Q4. (2) 22 single-product clients converted to multi-product by Q4. (3) Proactive outreach completed for 100% of book by end of Q2.
QUALITY SCORE	4.6 / 5.0 — Strong personal accountability, specific and verifiable metrics, well-grounded HOW. Calibration-ready.

◆ WORKDAY-READY TEXT — copy this directly into Workday	By end of Q4, I will grow my client satisfaction score from 7.4 to 8.5 and convert at least 22 single-product clients in my 180-client book to multi-product households, directly contributing to the team's goal of reaching 45% penetration. I'll do this by leading proactive, needs-based financial planning conversations across my whole book by Q2, holding myself to a personal quarterly tracking discipline, and making sure every client gets the same quality of engagement regardless of their profile.
--	---

■ PRESENTER TIP	Pause after the guardrail fires and say: 'This is the quality problem HR sees every year at calibration — objectives that read like job descriptions. The agent catches it before it gets there, explains the problem in plain language, and fixes it. No HR business partner has the bandwidth to do this for every employee. This agent does it at scale.'
-------------------------------	--

03

Cascading One Team Objective to Two Different Direct Reports

Back to your real role · Level: PEOPLE MANAGER · Stay in your profile

ROLE SWITCH INSTRUCTION

Back to my real role now — I'm a People Manager in Personal Banking. I want to use the cascade feature to create individual objectives for two of my direct reports from the same team objective.

What This Shows

Same team objective. Two direct reports. Two completely different individual objectives — each tailored to that person's role, accountability, and context. This demonstrates that the agent personalises outputs, not just formats them.

Suggested Prompt to Start

Cascade team objectives

Inputs to Provide

Your team objective	Increase multi-product household penetration from 38% to 45% and improve branch NPS from 62 to 72 by end of Q4
Direct report 1 — name and role	Aisha Tremblay — Client Experience Specialist. Owns the client onboarding journey from account open to first meaningful product conversation. Manages branch NPS and client feedback loop.
Aisha's key metric	Branch NPS is currently 62 — target is 72 by Q4. Post-onboarding client drop-off is also too high.
Direct report 2 — name and role	Kevin Nguyen — Personal Banking Associate. First year in role. Handles client intake, account opening, and supports advisors with product conversations.
Kevin's focus	Kevin is newer and still building confidence with product conversations. I want an objective that stretches him on client engagement without overwhelming him.
Culture principles	Act with client empathy, lead with accountability, champion inclusion, bring your whole self

Expected Output — Aisha Tremblay

STRATEGIC ALIGNMENT	Supports the branch team's commitment to improving NPS from 62 to 72 and multi-product penetration to 45% by Q4, advancing the enterprise priority of deepening client relationships through exceptional experience.
---------------------	--

WHAT	Improve branch NPS from 62 to 72 by Q4 by redesigning the client onboarding journey to create a natural first multi-product conversation within 30 days of account opening — reducing client drop-off after onboarding by 20% by Q3.
HOW	By acting with client empathy — designing the onboarding experience from the client's perspective, not the branch's process; leading with accountability by owning the NPS dashboard and presenting findings at each quarterly checkpoint; and championing inclusion by ensuring the redesigned journey is accessible and welcoming for clients of all backgrounds and financial literacy levels.
SUCCESS MEASURES	(1) Branch NPS reaches 72 by Q4. (2) Post-onboarding drop-off reduced 20% by Q3. (3) 70% of newly onboarded clients have a multi-product conversation within 30 days by Q3.
QUALITY SCORE	4.7 / 5.0 — Specific to Aisha's ownership of NPS. Distinct from an advisor objective. Calibration-ready.

◆ WORKDAY-READY TEXT — copy this directly into Workday	By Q4, I will improve branch NPS from 62 to 72 by redesigning the client onboarding journey so every new client has a natural, low-pressure multi-product conversation within 30 days of account opening — reducing post-onboarding drop-off by 20% by Q3. I'll design from the client's point of view rather than the branch's process, hold myself accountable to NPS results at each quarterly checkpoint, and make sure the new experience is genuinely welcoming for clients of every background and financial literacy level.
--	--

Expected Output — Kevin Nguyen

STRATEGIC ALIGNMENT	Supports the branch team's commitment to growing multi-product penetration and improving NPS by Q4, advancing the enterprise priority of sustainable revenue growth through stronger client relationships.
WHAT	Increase the percentage of account-opening conversations where a multi-product need is identified and referred to an advisor from 20% to 45% by end of Q3, building the client engagement habits that will define my career trajectory in Personal Banking.
HOW	By acting with client empathy — taking time in every account-opening conversation to understand why a client is here, not just completing the transaction; bringing my whole self by leaning into the genuine curiosity that makes clients feel heard; and leading with accountability by reviewing my referral rate weekly and asking my manager for coaching when I'm stuck.
SUCCESS MEASURES	(1) Multi-product referral rate from account openings reaches 45% by Q3. (2) Weekly self-review discipline maintained through Q4. (3) At least one coaching conversation per quarter with manager on client engagement skills.
QUALITY SCORE	4.5 / 5.0 — Appropriately stretching for a first-year associate. Grounded in Kevin's real starting point. Calibration-ready.

◆ WORKDAY-READY TEXT — copy this directly into Workday

By end of Q3, I will increase the percentage of my account-opening conversations where I identify and refer a multi-product need from 20% to 45%, building the client engagement habits that will define my growth in Personal Banking. I'll do this by genuinely taking time in every conversation to understand what brought the client in — not just completing the transaction — reviewing my referral rate weekly, and proactively asking for coaching when I need it.

■ PRESENTER TIP

Point out how different Aisha's and Kevin's objectives are despite coming from the same team goal. Say: 'Same team objective. Completely different outputs — one redesigning a process, one building a career habit. A manager writing these manually would spend half a day. The agent did both in under five minutes, and both are calibration-ready out of the box.'

04

Executive Sets Business Priorities and Cascades to Individual Objective

Persona: Sarah Chen — EVP, Personal Banking · Level: EXECUTIVE

ROLE SWITCH INSTRUCTION

For this scenario, please treat me as an Executive — Sarah Chen, EVP of Personal Banking. I want to go through the executive journey: starting with business priorities and cascading all the way to an individual objective.

What This Shows

The executive journey is the most strategically compelling flow in the demo. The agent starts at the top — business priorities and what success looks like by Q4 — then cascades through strategic outcomes, team OKRs, and finally a Workday-ready individual objective, all in one conversation. This is the strategic alignment story every executive in the room has wanted from performance management.

AGENT SAYS

"Good morning Sarah — I can see you're leading Personal Banking. Before we write any objectives, I'd like to start with your business priorities for the year. What are the two or three things your area absolutely has to deliver? Let's get those right first — everything else will cascade from there."

Suggested Prompt to Start

Set my objectives

Inputs to Provide as the Agent Asks

Business Priority 1	Grow personal banking revenue by deepening existing client relationships — move clients from single-product to multi-product households
What success looks like by Q4 (Priority 1)	Increase multi-product household penetration from 38% to 45% across the personal banking portfolio by end of Q4
Business Priority 2	Build the leadership and talent pipeline required to execute our three-year strategy — our succession health score is too low
What success looks like by Q4 (Priority 2)	Improve succession health from 51% to 60% across all VP and Director roles by Q4
Team objective to anchor individual objective	Drive multi-product penetration through relationship-led sales and talent investment — deliver 45% penetration and 60% succession health by Q4
Culture principles	Act with client empathy, lead with accountability, champion inclusion

Expected Output — Sarah Chen, EVP

STRATEGIC ALIGNMENT	This objective directly supports the Personal Banking team's commitment to deepening client relationships and building the talent pipeline — the two priorities that together determine whether the three-year strategy is executable.
WHAT	Drive multi-product household penetration from 38% to 45% and improve succession health from 51% to 60% across VP and Director roles — both by end of Q4 — by embedding relationship-led sales accountability and targeted talent investment across the Personal Banking leadership team.
HOW	By acting with client empathy in every stakeholder interaction — ensuring leaders are equipped and motivated to prioritise relationship depth over transaction volume; leading with accountability by setting clear quarterly targets with direct reports and reviewing progress at each quarterly checkpoint; and championing inclusion by ensuring equitable access to leadership development across all markets and segments.
SUCCESS MEASURES	(1) Multi-product penetration reaches 45% by end of Q4. (2) Succession health reaches 60% by Q4. (3) Quarterly checkpoint reviews completed with each direct report against both metrics.
QUALITY SCORE	4.8 / 5.0 — Dual-priority objective with explicit cascade and strong behavioural grounding. Calibration-ready.

◆ WORKDAY-READY TEXT — copy this directly into Workday	By end of Q4, I will drive multi-product household penetration from 38% to 45% and improve succession health from 51% to 60% across VP and Director roles by embedding relationship-led sales accountability and targeted talent investment across the Personal Banking leadership team. I'll achieve this by ensuring my leaders are equipped and motivated to prioritise relationship depth, setting clear quarterly targets with each direct report, and championing equitable access to leadership development so every market has the same opportunity to deliver.
---	---

■ PRESENTER TIP	This is your closing moment. Say: 'What you just saw is a complete performance management cycle in one conversation — from business priority to calibration-ready individual objective, in the employee's own voice, ready to paste into Workday. No HR involvement. No back and forth. That's the value proposition: better objectives, faster, for every employee at every level.'
------------------------	---

Live Demo Checklist — What to Watch For

Verify these behaviours appear during the demo. If any are missing, pause and check the agent instructions before continuing.

■ Auto level detection	Scenario 1: agent identifies you as a People Manager without asking. No level question appears.
■ One question at a time	Agent never presents a list of fields or a form. Each response ends with a single focused question.
■ Dependency check	Agent asks whether team objectives are confirmed before writing individual objectives (Manager and IC journeys).
■ Guardrail fires on weak input	Scenario 2: agent explains why the draft is task-based before rewriting — it does not silently accept it.
■ All five components present	Every objective includes: Strategic Alignment, WHAT, HOW, Success Measures, Quality Score.
■ Quality Score with rationale	Score appears with a one-line explanation. Any dimension below 3.5 is called out explicitly.
■ Workday text is personal	Uses the person's real role, team, project names, and metrics — reads like they wrote it.
■ No half-year language	Q1, Q2, Q3, Q4 only. H1, H2, semi-annual do not appear anywhere.
■ Role switch works cleanly	Scenarios 2 and 4: agent confirms the persona switch and adapts the journey immediately.
■ Follow-up offer after each objective	Agent offers to refine, cascade, check calibration readiness, or prep a manager conversation.

Key Messages for the Room

- It starts with the person, not the form In Scenario 1 you didn't type your name or your level — the agent already knew. That's the experience: it meets the employee where they are.
- Quality control at scale Scenario 2 shows what HR can't do manually for 80,000 employees. The agent catches weak objectives before they reach calibration, explains the problem, and fixes it.

■ Role-aware, not one-size-fits-all

Scenario 3: same team objective, two completely different outputs tailored to the person's role and starting point. The agent knows the difference between a specialist redesigning a process and an associate building a career habit.

■ Strategy to Workday in one conversation

Scenario 4: an EVP goes from business priority to calibration-ready individual objective without leaving the chat window. That's the alignment story performance management has been trying to solve for years.

■ A year-round coach, not an annual tool

The same agent that writes objectives also preps you for manager conversations, checks calibration readiness, and helps cascade to your team. It's a performance coach available to every employee, on demand, all year.

CONFIDENTIAL — PREPARED FOR EXECUTIVE PRESENTATION | DO NOT DISTRIBUTE